HONGKONG, SEPTEMBER 10TH, 1890.

SEVERAL matters of importance were discussed at the last meeting of the Sanitary Board. The question of how Chinese gardens are to be dealt with when European houses are built in their neighbourhood is one as to which it is desirable some definite decision should be arrived at. Are the occupants of the European house to be poisoned by the effluvia created by Chinese methods of fertilisation, are the Chinese to be deprived of their means of livelihood without compensation, or are they to be bought out? As the law at present stands it is illegal to use liquid manure within fifty yards of a public road, but ordinarily the Police would not think of instituting a prosecution unless some person in the neighbourhood complained of the nuisance. Where gardens have been cultivated ever since the acquisition of the Colony and possibly long before it certainly seems inequitable that gardeners should be interfered with in their method of cultivation simply because a European happens to come and live beside them. The only way out of the difficulty appears to be that the Government should put the gardeners whom the latter hold direct from the Crown, but where the land is private property and the owner chooses to use part of it for residences and to let part in Chinese gardens it would seem that he is the proper person to settle with his tenants and that the Government should not be called upon to interfere. Where, however, the gardens are on Crown land it seems impossible to avoid a recognition of the principle of compensation. The expense would not be very great, and when land is sold for European residences it is the duty of the Government to see that the locality is made habitable for Europeans, and this without doing injustice to any native occupiers there may be in the neighbourhood. But if the principle of compensation be adopted it will become more than ever necessary to follow out the policy on open into the outer air and not into the building. The custom amongst the Chinese is for the males of the household to go to the public latrines, and it was believed that if privies were provided in private houses they would only become a nuisance if used at all, and that under no circumstances would they be used by females, who would adhere to the existing arrangements. If the Sanitary Board is going to take up this question it would do well to refer to the records of the previous discussion. It is very undesirable that an unpopular innovation should be forced on the Chinese unless some substantial benefit is to be derived from it.

The French gunboat Vifor, Commander Gondet, arrived here yesterday from the Coast of China.

Mr. S. K. Kirby, who is missing, disappeared from Chaffron's restaurant a few days ago, is said to have arrived at Macao and to have left there for Nanking. He is supposed to have been captured by pirates and to be in their power.
